Abstract

The world today is in a dangerous phase due to Corona pandemic. The negative impact of this pandemic has not only reflected on the financial and economic issues of countries, but also on international relations. In our article, we will deal with this impact and the problems, crises and accusations between USA and China.

Introduction

The world is governed by common international laws that regulate relations between countries and societies, and these laws and regulations are important in balancing relations between countries. Certainly, if the world is exposed to a general threat, then all countries, by their laws, unite to confront this imminent danger. What the world is going through today after Corona turns into a pandemic is a challenge for the entire world and all societies, and in this way the spirit of cooperation between societies and countries must prevail to confront this challenge. There must be international laws regulating methods of confrontation. The writer deals in a number of issues in his article, including exchanging accusations between countries about the source of the virus, how it appeared in the Chinese city of Wuhan? How it is transmitted to the whole world? What is the real role of China in exporting the virus to the rest of the countries? What is the size of the losses that befell the world? And what gains did China achieve as a result?

In the logical analysis, we find that the only beneficiary of this virus, despite the human and economic losses incurred, is China that has the accusation index in manufacturing and spreading this virus to other countries around the world, especially the European countries (European Union) and America. It is a struggle between the Chinese Communist camp and the western camp, represented by America and European countries. Hence, the importance of the article is demonstrated by the importance of Corona pandemic, its negative impact on international relations, its human and economic impact, and the identification of real indicators for the beginning of a third world war in which conventional weapons are not used, but rather a new type of biological warfare that is more deadly than conventional wars.

The first Chapter

Exchange of accusations:

The world recently witnessed a landslide attack by the Corona virus, the virus that suddenly invaded the world and spread like wildfire. The great powers exchanged accusations with each other regarding the source of the virus. As US President Donald Trump accused China directly, when he described the virus as a "Chinese virus" in a direct indication that it was China that manufactured the virus, and then sent it to the rest of the world. In return, China responded by the Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman that it was the US military that introduced the virus to Wuhan, the city worst affected by the outbreak. The Chinese accusations came directly to President Donald Trump personally, asking some questions about the number of American casualties and what are the names of hospitals they are treated with? On the other hand, the Russian media focused on one point repeatedly, which is that western political elites, especially the American ones, are behind this epidemic. Further, German Foreign Minister Haikou Maas also expressed his concern over the subsequent correction of death figures in Wuhan, the birthplace of the Corona virus epidemic, calling on the Chinese authorities to seek transparency regarding the epidemic's origins and spread.

The beginning of the emergence of the virus:

The virus first appeared in China, specifically in Wuhan, and from its popular market, as this city is famous for its biological and genetic laboratories. In Wuhan, the casualties were increasing daily until it reached 3,000 deaths and tens of thousands of injured people, amid a strong media silence from China. Meanwhile, China has used its media tools to show that it is a victim of this disease. She composed songs that call on Wuhan to withstand this brute virus, and at the same time a nurse appeared on YouTube saying that the number of infections exceeds 90,000 infections, and this nurse may be just a media tool used by China to appear as the victim. Meanwhile, the number of injuries in Europe and America was zero, which led to pointing the finger directly at America and the West. As the superpowers have realized the size of China's economic and military danger to America and the West, which necessitates a biological and economic war, which is a new type of war. Meanwhile, China has taken strict measures to control the disease. It completely isolated Wuhan, travel to and from China was banned, and trade in it stopped. A fully equipped hospital was built within 10 days, and it was equipped with robots to prevent direct contact between the injured and the doctors. The event was a demonstration of China's technology development and progress, which helped control the disease. Meanwhile, countries have demanded the evacuation of their nationals, students and employees of foreign companies from China, which have been portrayed as a country where death is inevitably common. This matter led to a decline in the shares of foreign companies very significantly, which is something that China exploited when it bought these shares almost free of charge, and here is the stall of the Persians, as we will notice later. It is true that travel was banned to China, trade stopped, and border ports and ports were closed, which led to its loss of 17% of the economy, according to reports received.

The second Chapter:

The emergence of the virus in Europe and America:

Europe today and in particular Italy, Spain, France, Germany and Britain are suffering from Corona virus, and have lost many lives and money, and have become ghost states, as the smell of death is spreading everywhere, and the wheel of life has stopped, and all competitions, periodicals and sports decrees have been postponed, which has led to losses exorbitant economic and financial. Europe today stands helpless in the face of this disease, and what Italy's announcement that it is practicing "medicine of war" is a proof of that. But the question that arises here is how the disease spread to Europe. It is reported that the disease started from Italy, which used to receive tourists from all over the world to perform a religious occasion in the Vatican. Which led to millions traveling to it, and among these travelers there were two Chinese infected with the virus, and some of them moved to the rest of the travelers and spread in the rest of the European countries. The traditions, customs and social customs of these countries contributed to spreading the virus, as family members make mutual visits, which leads to mixing and contact, which contributes to spreading the disease. Another reason is that the Italians underestimated the disease, as they thought that it was just a regular flu and it would go away within a few days, but this underestimation led to the increase and rapid spread of the epidemic. In addition, the failure to adhere to the sanitary curfew called by the Italian government, which was confirmed by the medical delegation coming from China when he stated that "the Italians are not obligated to implement the curfew." But the most important question remains, how did the Chinese travel to Italy despite their illness? Did China allow them to travel to spread the disease? Is it reasonable that China does not know that they are afflicted, despite its technological progress? America today witnesses the same thing that Europe has suffered and witnessed. It is reported that more than 5,000 people are injured daily, due to the lack of effective treatment to treat them. Today America is losing economically and its dollar is collapsing day after day amid large losses in stocks.

China attacks the West and America:

It is the Third World War, which will not witness the shooting of a single bullet, but rather it is another type of war; it is the biological war that is more deadly than the usual wars. As one of the conditions of war is death and earning a lot of money. China has succeeded in its war against America and the West, despite losing 17% of the economy, but do not forget that most of the foreign companies that were in China have become almost fully owned by China. China has succeeded in its dirty game, as it sacrificed 3000 people, which is not worth anything for its population of 1,800,000,000, and it won economically, and it showed its ability and technological development when it relied on robotics to control the disease. Now China is one of the safest countries, and there are no new injuries or deaths recorded in it, except for a few cases that claim to come from abroad. Today, Wuhan has been declared a safe city, and the curfew has been lifted, and life has suddenly returned to normal as if it was a pre-planned scenario. But at the same time, China is playing its commercial game by exporting masks and medical equipment to countries of the world, and every day passes China gains more and more. It also sends its medical teams to other countries to control the disease. How beautiful it is when the executioner plays the victim who overcame her executioner and began helping the oppressed to overcome the disease. China today is a large economic country to be reckoned with and capable of subjugating the superpowers without firing a shot. US President Donald Trump's statement when he said "China should help today" is only evidence of the inability of America and its allies to confront the disease.

The spread of the disease in allied countries of China:

But at the same time we note that the disease has spread in Russia and Iran and they are China's allies, but how did the disease cross from China to Iran without passing through India, Pakistan and Afghanistan? Is it an artificial scenario from China to dominate the whole world, including its allies? Or what happened was a coincidence?

America and the West attacking China:

It is known to the whole world that it is America that dominates the world and no other country can attack it, but it was surprised by what China did and how many losses it suffered as a result of this attack. America has allies in various countries of the world, in addition to military bases close to countries that it considers its enemy. If it is proved that China was the one that manufactured the virus and spread it in Europe and America, will China be considered a terrorist country and a source of death? What are the next steps that America and its allies will take after the disease is gone? Will China attack militarily? Or will magic turn against the magician? If China is condemned internationally and boycotted commercially and economically, will it be able to contest this competition? Or will it be destroyed and collapsed and will not be able to face this confrontation? Will China realize the size of the game it has played? The coming days are full of surprises.

Conclusion:

By analyzing the data in the research field, the writer concluded that Corona virus is a virus manufactured by China and spread it in the countries around the world in order to destroy and disperse its enemies, and in order to earn a lot of money and develop its economy by exporting medical equipment and gags. In addition to buying shares of foreign companies located in China after the price of shares of these companies decreased significantly. So far, China is the only winner from what is happening, and every day passes, it profits more and more. On the contrary, Europe and America are losing more and more every day, and they have so far been unable to cope with this disease and its dependence on importing medical equipment and masks from China, as well as stopping tourism, industry, trade and agriculture and all other activities in these countries. Such stop leads to major economic losses in various fields.
